Marseille, 1973. Le commissaire Daquin, vingt-sept ans à peine, prend son premier poste au commissariat de l'Évêché, et découvre une ville ensanglantée par les règlements de compte qui accompagnent la liquidation de la French Connection, des services de police en guerre larvée les uns contre les autres, et la prolifération de réseaux semi-clandestins comme le SAC ou la franc-maçonnerie. Il enquête sur l'assassinat d'un ancien caïd de la drogue et de son associé, un vétéran des services secrets, tous les deux reconvertis dans les affaires ; assiste à la naissance mouvementée d'un nouveau marché des produits pétroliers, à l'ascension fulgurante des traders assoiffés d'argent frais qui le mettent en œuvre ; et constate que les requins les plus dangereux ne sont pas ceux que l'on croit...
